

urban advantage

middle school science initiative

The goal of Urban Advantage—to support and improve teaching and learning in public school science education—is shared by many urban school districts across the country. In 2007, the American Museum of Natural History began an effort to partner with science-rich institutions in other major American cities to adapt Urban Advantage to their education outreach efforts. The following institutions, with their public school districts are planning Urban Advantage in their public schools for the 2009-2010 academic year. Please click on the Institution logo to visit their site.

Support for the National Urban Advantage Network is provided by The Goldman Sachs Foundation.

The Goldman Sachs Foundation is a global philanthropic organization which promotes excellence and innovation in education and works to improve the academic performance and lifelong productivity of young people worldwide through a combination of strategic partnerships, grants, loans, private sector investments, and the deployment of professional talent from Goldman Sachs.

